“The British Journal of Visual Impairment provides a key platform for sharing knowledge between practitioners and researchers working in the field of visual impairment and blindness. It is vital that the impact of developments in diagnosis, assessment, treatment, management and policy is shared with and monitored by all working in this important arena.”

G. Morbey, Chief Executive, Sense Scotland, UK
The British Journal of Visual Impairment is for all professionals concerned with children and adults who have a visual impairment and is a forum for all views on related subjects.

The purpose of the journal is to publish articles, reviews and scholarly comment which have been judged worthy of publication by appropriate specialists and accepted by the Editor on studies relating to Visual Impairment. The journal will also publish shorter and less scientifically-oriented accounts from visually impaired people themselves and from their families as they reflect on their experiences. Practitioners are asked to contribute their thoughts, opinions and issues encountered and dealt with in their everyday practice.

The journal will be international in the sense that it will seek, wherever possible, to publish material from authors with an international reputation and articles that are of interest to an international audience.

As well as scholarly papers and reports on current and recently completed research, the editors welcome short ‘research notes’ on new work and also papers of a more reflective and personal nature from people who are themselves visually impaired or who are supporting a blind or partially-sighted person.

FORTHCOMING CONTENTS WILL INCLUDE:
- Terminology and the psychosocial burden of blindness
  David Bolt
- Comparison of the use of the Internet by partially-sighted and blind pupils placed in a special school environment
  Rob Jones
- Higher education or vocational training in niryoka?: post school choices of visually-impaired students.
  Part 2, Japan
  Meng Ee Wong
- Visually-impaired students and university examinations
  Konstantinos S. Papadopoulos and Dimitrios B.
  Goudiras
- If I remember rightly – tactile illustrations enable greater access to books

- The pain and pleasure of travel
  Kevin Carey

“The British Journal of Visual Impairment is a lively forum expressing current viewpoints, in an accessible form, on a variety of professional concerns. It is exceptional in that it encompasses a wide range of issues and perspectives related to visual impairment - some of these are special, some general, but all are significant.”

PROFESSOR LINDA PRING, Goldsmiths College, University of London, UK

“The British Journal of Visual Impairment is an extremely valuable publication enabling academics and practitioners to share and debate practical and theoretical issues relating to visual impairment. It brings together the wealth of stakeholders concerned with this area of work including visually impaired people, social researchers, educators, rehabilitation workers, psychologists, optometrists, and policy makers.”

DR GRAEME DOUGLAS, Visual Impairment Centre for Teaching and Research (VICTAR), School of Education, University of Birmingham, UK

“The British Journal of Visual Impairment combines a high standard of academic excellence with clarity of presentation and practical relevance. It is a most important forum and source of new knowledge for researchers, teachers, and for people who are interested in acquiring and maintaining literacy and spatial mobility.”

DR SUSANNA MILLAR, University of Oxford, UK

CALL FOR PAPERS

The editorial board welcomes articles of current interest on research, education, health, welfare, employment and technology. The journal invites contributions relevant to any aspect of the care, education, psychological development, and the medical/social/vocational rehabilitation of children and adults who are visually impaired. Given the wide range of professional and academic disciplines which impinge on the subject, authors should write and structure their papers to make them accessible to practitioner and researchers outside as well as within, their own particular disciplines. The journal will also publish shorter and less scientifically-oriented accounts from visually impaired people themselves and from their families as they reflect on their experiences. Practitioners are asked to contribute their thoughts, opinions and issues encountered and dealt with in their everyday practice.
